X-MEN X-PLANATIONS

As part of a storyline called "The Age of Apocalypse", all the X titles changed, causing some confusion for collectors and retailers alike The basis of the change came about in X-Men Alpha, which told of Professor Xavier's mutant son Legion going back in time and murdering him Thus the X-Men were never formed and all the familiar X-titles ceased to exist for the four month duration of the story, culminating in X-Men Omega Below is a list of the pre X-Men Alpha titles and their changes

CABLE becomes X-MAN
EXCALIBUR becomes X-CALIBRE
GENERATION X becomes THE MUTANTS GENERATION NEXT
UNCANNY X-MEN becomes THE MUTANTS THE ASTONISHING X-MEN
WOLVERINE becomes WEAPON X
X-FACTOR becomes FACTOR X
X FORCE becomes GAMBIT & THE X-TERNALS
X MEN becomes THE MUTANTS THE AMAZING X-MEN
X MEN UNLIMITED becomes X-MEN CHRONICLES

British Comics Guide

AN INTRODUCTION TO BRITISH COMICS

Cut a collector of British comics and you will find nostalgia flowing in his veins – the memory of a scene, or a certain character, or the excellence of an anonymous artist are all spurs that will turn a reader into a collector. Traditionally, British comics have been aimed at a young audience up to the age of fourteen and the influence of comics in those formative years is incalculable; that such disposable ephemera would be of any interest to you after that age (or whatever age you gave up reading comics, after all, it's kid's stuff, isn't it?) is difficult to imagine, yet the past few years have seen a change towards comics and to comic collecting.

A combination of events have given the public a greater awareness of comics: the arrival of graphic novels such as The Dark Knight Returns (1986) and Watchmen (1988), neither of which were available through general retailers in their original formats, caused a stir in the British media. Comics, it was said, were not necessarily 'kid's stuff' any longer, and the publicity machine which rolled in their wake spotlighted the adult direction comics can take. The emphasis was on the very differences between recent titles such as Crisis and Revolver and the traditional British comic, yet the collecting of the latter also took an upswing around the same time, probably due to the interest in, and the coverage given to, the anniversaries of The Dandy, The Beano and Eagle in that period (1987-90). For a change these comics received a great deal of serious attention in the press, where comics only seem to be mentioned when they are the target of some pressure group trying to get them banned for promoting violence and sado-masochism.

A history of British comics would require a book in itself: an albeit short but representative history by Lew Stringer appeared in The Comics Journal 122, June 1988 (an issue which covered many aspects of British comics). Rather than repeat the information available there, this introduction will try to cover some of the various collectable aspects of British comics.

The direction of collecting has changed greatly over the years. There will always be the hard-core of fans who will collect the comics they read as a child, but as time marches on, comics published early in the century drift into obscurity, the realm of specialists and completists. The British 'Golden Age' comics of the thirties, with the advent of the 1d provincial comics and the ever present comics of the Amalgamated Press such as Comic Cuts, Illustrated Chips and Puck still attract collectors. The thirties also saw the first photogravure comic in the shape of Mickey Mouse Weekly 1936 and the birth of The Dandy (1937) and The Beano (1938). Pre-War comics such as these are very rare and probably command the highest prices of all British comics; who can tell how many copies were pulped during the War-time when paper was at a premium.

Perhaps the greatest nostalgia generator of them all appeared in 1950 to herald the arrival of the 'Silver Age' – Eagle. The brainchild of Marcus Morris and artist Frank Hampson, Eagle introduced 'Dan Dare' in its first issue. Hampson's perfectionist attitude to the strip assured Dare a place in the history books as Britain's most fondly remembered hero. His other strips were drawn with the same loving care for detail, making them equally collectable.

Hampson spearheads the group of artists whose every page is collected rather than specific characters they may have worked on, although (as with Hampson) they may be remembered for one strip above all others. In this group would be such artists as Frank Bellamy whose work for Eagle included biographical strips such as 'The Happy Warrior' (Winston Churchill) and 'Montgomery of Alamein', adventure strips 'Fraser of Africa' and 'Heros the Spartan', and 'Dan Dare' himself. Bellamy also did numerous other notable strips such as 'Thunderbirds' in TV Century 21 and 'Garth' in the Daily Mirror newspaper.

Don Lawrence is best remembered for 'The Rise and Fall of the Trigan Empire' which first appeared in Ranger and later in the educational weekly Look and Learn. His earlier work on 'Olac the Gladiator' in Tiger and 'Karl the Viking' in Lion continue to prove popular, particularly in Europe where Lawrence has chronicled the adventures of 'Storm' for the past fourteen years.

Ron Embleton's career ranged from the one-off comics of the late forties, through classic strips such as 'Wrath of the Gods' in Boys' World and 'Wulf the Briton' in Express Weekly, 'Stingray' and 'Captain Scarlet' in TV Century 21, all the way to 'Oh Wicked Wanda' and 'Sweet Chastity' in Penthouse.

Also in the group of particularly collected artists would be the classic artists of the early days such as Tom Browne, Percy Cocking, Bertie Brown and Roy Wilson; the artists who made D.C. Thomson's comics amongst the most widely read by children, Dudley D. Watkins, Paddy Brennan and the stars of the fifties funny strips, Leo Baxendale and Ken Reid; the great adventure artists of Amalgamated Press, Eric Parker, H.M. Brock, Hugh McNeil, Derek Eyles, and later Joe Colquhoun and Denis McLoughlin. The traditional anonymity of British comics has meant that many names are still unknown, and the use of European and South American artists (amongst the most notable being Hugo Pratt, Jesus Blasco, Alberto Breccia, Esteban Maroto, Enric Sio and Solano Lopez) via agencies has further complicated the issue of who did which strip. The re-introduction of credits in 2000AD has led to greater interest in the artists themselves, and the work of Brian Bolland, Dave Gibbons, Simon Bisley and others who have found work and wider recognition in America, have built up followers in great numbers.

Nostalgia isn't limited to the comics themselves. Film, radio and TV have all created memorable characters which have made the translation into strip form. Film Fun, Radio Fun and later TV Comic all plundered their respective media for inspiration and not only for particular characters: the artists and actors themselves were often the heroes of the strips, ranging from Harold Lloyd (under the guise of 'Winkle') to Big Daddy (the wrestler). Most of the characters starred in humour strips, but adventure strips based on TV shows are particularly sought after. The Gerry Anderson puppet shows inspired their own comic in TV Century 21, whilst The Avengers, The Man From U.N.C.L.E., Danger Man and many others continue to grow in popularity long after their respective shows have ceased production. Dr Who has had one of the longest and varied careers in British comics and still appears today.

One area in which British and American comics have differed greatly is in the genre of the costumed superhero. Whilst the heroes and supergroups have crossed the Atlantic, notable in the Power Comics of the sixties, Smash! Pow!, Terrific and Fantastic, and via the British end of Marvel Comics, there have been few home-grown successes. The earliest weekly costumed hero was 'The Amazing Mr X' in Dandy 1944, although there had been occasional short lived strips earlier, an example being William Ward's macabre, Batman inspired, 'The Bat' who appeared in Thrill Comics and Extra Fun in 1940. The most successful was Marvelman, produced by Mick Anglo's Gower Street Studios between 1954 and 1963, although he was a derivative of the American character Captain Marvel. 'Marvelman' was revived in 1982 in Warrior with writer Alan Moore at the helm. Moore was also writing Captain Britain for Marvel UK (at various times in Marvel Super-heroes, The Daredevils and The Mighty World of Marvel), another strip which had American origins, albeit that it was created and originally written and drawn by Americans for the British market. Both characters subsequently made successful moves to America in Miracleman and Excalibur.

The British comic at its conception was designed for adults, using the strips to caricature and satirise popular figures of the time, yet it is now predominantly a form of children's entertainment. That doesn't mean that adult comics ceased to exist, for in the early seventies there was a thriving underground movement led by Cyclops, Nasty Tales, Cozmic Comix and the many other comix that were published by the Ar-Zak group These and the adult orientated comics that followed such as Graphixus, Near Myths and more recently Knockabout nurtured the talents of many new artists, amongst them Brian Bolland, Dave Gibbons, Bryan Talbot and Hunt Emerson.

Also aimed at the more adult end of the market (with varying degrees of success) were the independents which sprung up in the recent past. These have been helped by the distribution services and specialist shops which have grown up around the comics industry Amongst the more notable titles to appear in the past ten years was Deadface from Harrier, Redfox and The Adventures of Luther Arkwright from Valkyrie and the graphic novel Violent Cases from Escape. The Fast Fiction group published and distributed numerous small-press comics, whilst the (admittedly patchy) growth of the graphic novel may lead to more appearances of comics in regular retail outlets and booksellers which have previously only carried juvenile material to any great extent

1994-95: TWO YEARS IN REVIEW

What has gone before:

The year is 1995. The British comics industry existed, but in turmoil, a world of declining sales and falling hope. However, one man stood tall and strong, his task: to single-handedly save the industry His name: Judge Dredd

Now read on...

Our recap panel may be jokey, the past twenty-four months of British comics have been the most worthy of a comic strip themselves ever 1995 was dominated by news of big-budget movies based on comic properties, most of them new to the screen, the biggest news of all being the coming of Judge Dredd to the silver screen. It was the Cursed Earth saga in real life Dredd, the only icon in British comics now worth using as a metaphor, was to ride out across the Cursed turmoil of the British Comics Industry carrying his life-saving serum, taking comics to the roving, disinterested hoards outside the sheltering walls of fandom.

On Dredd's broad shoulders rested the fate of British comics. The Stallone PR department dispensed rapid fire news releases like bullets from a Lawgiver. Like heatseekers they found their target, and no lawless tabloid escaped the reports. Early news from the set was promising, and the budget took a substantial leap in pre-production. With Fleetway planning to blitz the marketplace with Dredd material in the wake of the movie, no industry watcher could deny that the movie was going to revive the idea of comics in the minds of the masses.

John Wagner would have been proud to have written the true outcome Who else would have typed the words "the serum was a dud"? The long haul was for nothing, the end results critically slaughtered in the States where the film opened in the blockbuster Independence Day weekend slot. Stallone's "Let them eat celluloid" attitude summed up his feelings as he backed away from publicising the movie on its release. The debate raged: released in the wake of Batman Forever comparisons were inevitable, and where the latter was a brash, outrageous flight of multi-coloured, over-the-top performance art, Judge Dredd seemed seriously slow, colourless in both acting and plot in comparison. The pros of choosing a young British director – because he would understand the character and be able to bring out the line of dark humour that typifies Dredd – became buried by the cons of his inexperience

Simply put, Judge Dredd was a badly conceived movie. The plot was only an average one for Dredd and the faults in the movie could not be covered by a wallpaper of wonderful designs and grandiose backdrops. The meter of the film was wrong, climaxing in the middle and running on empty by the end.

Why should we concentrate on the merits – or demerits – of one film?

Because few comics these days will be released unless they are part of a multi-media event. Where the Judge Dredd Megazine was launched in 1990 without the brouhaha of a film release, British comics have become accessories to the world of media entertainment – just part of the package deal. Judge Dredd: Lawman of the Future was launched to co-incide with the film, the Megazine was relaunched, and serious thought was put into renumbering 2000AD so it too could be relaunched. Dredd was always the skeleton of 2000AD on which other strips are hung like limbs, but it has to be said that for too many years those limbs have been withered and unsupportive, bending and almost breaking the papers' spine. The movie was seen as a steroid boost to put the paper back on its feet, unfortunately the 'steroids' were no more than an Anadin, curing the symptoms and not the disease.

In critical terms, both 2000AD and the Megazine benefited from having more direction and more balls than they'd had in years but sadly that didn't translate into sales. The Megazine has since gone monthly, and Lawman of the Future folded. In a effort to force an editorial change, the Megazine's long-time editor David Bishop and 2000AD's John Tomlinson have recently switched places. As this has only just occurred at the time of writing, whether this has the desired effect is still in the lap of the Gods

The same story could be told for the Tank Girl movie, on which was pinned the hopes of Deadline, Britain's most overground underground comic. The tanking of Tank Girl: The Movie has finally buried Deadline The movie industry isn't always a white dove holding an olive branch in its beak. Sometimes it's a vulture and it will eat you. What amazed and dismayed most fans was the departure of Tank Girl herself from Deadline, heading off for pastures new: although packaged by the same team Tank Girl: The Comic (get used to these 'The Movie' and 'The Comic' dogtags – you'll need them to tell one grunt from another in the multimedia age) was published by Manga Publishing for all of eight issues. From riding high in the turret of Deadline, TG has become a sad victim of her disastrous franchise. And the film will be how she is remembered petulant and squeaky. The evil that men do lives after them, wrote Shakespeare. The good is oft interred with their bones. The film built high upon its comic strip foundations didn't die alone. It collapsed and suffocated its Caesar, damning her with the praise and high promise offered before the opening credits rolled.

Why should it surprise us? For every brilliant Batman movie there has been a dozen poisonous Punishers, for every single Superman and score of Superman IVs. The promise of reasonable adaptations like The Crow and The Mask – both worth the merit the film industry held them in – led to a gluttonous feeding frenzy, film companies picking up rights to films with little idea of how they were to translate them off the page. Stallone and Schwarzenegger are superstars not superheroes. You cannot equate the two.

Let's examine some of the comic releases over the past couple of years. The most successful launches in the past eighteen months have been adaptations not from film but from elsewhere, mostly from television: The X-Files has been a phenomenal success, reprinting the Topps comic strip with a smattering of background features. Low costs and high sales have guaranteed it a Price Guide 'Success' merit badge Tailcoating on a cult TV show which continues to draw more fans each season by word of mouth means that the natural attrition comics tend to suffer – no new fans replacing those that drift off into other areas – may not happen for some time. Boom issues, those twice-a-year promoted editions with the tacky free gift taped to the cover, only run for three issues at the most. All publishing companies dream of the free advertising a 26 week run on television offers and the awareness that brings to the crowds thronging W.H Smiths on a Saturday

The most successful comic launches in many years were not aimed at the same age group while sales of pre-movie 2000AD were sliding below 60,000, Fleetway's Tots TV launched at over 200,000 copies, and settled at a figure well in the 100,000s, making it and Budgie based on the Duchess of York's chatty baby helicopter, and itself backed up with a successful children's TV slot – their best selling titles.

Not that television makes for instant success. Fallers in the mid-nineties warzone included Look-In which, in the past decade, had turned from a comic with features into a Smash Hits clone with a couple of cartoons, and the Anderson franchise comics, which had switched from Fleetway to an independent publisher in early 1995, but failed to take off once the shows were off the air. The junior comic market has suffered its own downswing, with Buster slipping to fortnightly and the restructuring in 1994 of the Fleetway humour department which pulled a number of reprint titles into one big value comic called the BVC (of course!).

The only recent launch of note in the junior market has been Manga Publishing's Space Precinct, a live action Anderson series which – shock! – hasn't been an instant hit; sadly, the poor viewing figures for its terrestrial slot on BBC2 were also reflected in poor sales figures for the comic and, as one insider put it, it bombed. Space Precinct aside, Manga Publishing have been one of the few success stories in British comics these past two years. Founded out of the ashes of Dark Horse International in 1994, the company is a spin-off from Manga Video whose release of Akira in 1991 heralded a wave of japanese animated cartoon (anime) releases. Taking over Manga Mania and Jurassic Park at first (although the dinosaur reprints soon went the way of their jurassic originals), Manga Publishing have carved out a slice of the market pie with strong releases: X-Files, Streetfighter and Mortal Kombat and a line of graphic novels reprinting material from Dark Horse and Viz Communications. The anime boom – slowing but still maintaining a good head of steam – has carried Manga Mania into the top-selling (comics, that is) category. Attractively priced, and having revamped with added colour in 1994, it offers one of the most value-for money packages around. A further revamp, probably to coincide with the completion of 'Akira', could give the title another kick start.

The other end of the scale was the launches of Tower Comics, which achieved the worst press of any new launch possible, produced by Northern & Shell, best known for their X-rated porn titles, the company attracted a number of ex-Marvel UK employees over the months they operated. Their first launch ("Ai, ai, ai. If this isn't the comic you've all been waiting for, then I must be a monkey's auntie" said the intro) was based on Mighty Morphin Power Rangers which looked suspiciously like it had been put together by a monkey's auntie. An equally poor Action Man title helped burn Tower Comics' rickety bridge, with sales poor at one end and support from professionals collapsing at the other amidst threats of court action. Ex-Marvel UK employees rapidly became ex-Northern & Shell employees also.

Marvel UK itself became something of a shadow land; their parent company had purchased the Panini sticker company based in Rome but with British offices in Tunbridge Wells. An immediate cost-cutting round saw the folding of almost all Marvel's magazine division, the exception being the long-running Dr Who Magazine. Hammer Horror, newcomers Bizarre, Playback and Clive Barker's Hellraiser all folded immediately, and changes within Marvel's juvenile comics saw a number of planned launches canned. The VR Troopers tie-in lasted a scant few issues before Marvel UK shut down their Arundel House offices and relocated to Tunbridge Wells, downsizing at the same time.

The move comes as no surprise when you consider the extreme changes that Marvel UK's parent company went through in the same period. The loss of the Americanized Marvel UK titles was summed up by Marvel UK's Paul Neary in Comics Buyer's Guide #1081 (August 5, 1994) thus: "Think of Marvel UK as a studio, producing comics by talented people in our area. Our location gives us another pool of talent and a slightly different take on things..." and then listed Pino Rinaldi, Fonteriz, Carlos Pacheco and Sal Larroca as his top artists. All Spanish. Not British. But, ignoring that:

"Because we're from a slightly different culture, if we aimed dead-on mainstream we'd be slightly off. And I think that's the way to do it because of what we've done in the past, when we published under our own imprint. We've aimed well off mainstream to start with, and by the time we finish with all of our different cultural stuff, it's been so far off that it's been hard to see where it fits in." The results: comics that were unattractive to both American and British audiences. They folded.

Realigning the company to concentrate on the UK did not work, although perhaps the writing was already on the wall a year before when Lou Bank told retailers on September 17 1993, "Every once in a while you're going to have an artist on a title that may really increase it's sales, but for the most part, you're not getting new launches with hot new artists on them. Certainly not from Marvel UK. Boy, now there's a quote. You've got to understand we're not aiming at most of you [the retailers] as part of our target audience. Marvel's target audience is 12-18 year old males...Marvel isn't the one that has to publish to every single audience. That's not what we specialise in...we want to expand our audience; we don't expand upwards, we expand downwards. Make all the jokes you want, we're looking for the younger readers, that's what Marvel is, plain and simple." Soon after, Bank left the UK for Dark Horse.

The shuffling and reshuffling of companies has left the UK market with its lowest comic output in 100 years. Marvel's streamlining has pushed it back into third place for number of titles, second place now reverting to Dundee's D.C. Thomson who rise from third position by dint of a steady output of 11 titles. Just ahead of them are Fleetway Editions, although how long their parents – Gutenberghus, the Denmark publishing giants – will maintain an output in Britain in the face of eroding sales is down more to the success of titles abroad than in Britain. There is a possibility that Fleetway will become a studio for talent, supplying comics to countries where they will sell...not such a far fetched notion when you know that this is precisely what has happened with D.C. Thomson, who employ staff to create comics which are only published abroad.

Over the past two years the number of original graphic novels has just about fallen to zero, with only two titles appearing in 1994-95 – Mr Punch by Neil Gaiman & Dave McKean and Playing the Game by Doris Lessing and Charlie Adlard. Both Titan and Boxtree maintained a steady schedule, reprinting from DC, Dark Horse and Marvel; Manga launched a new line of manga reprints in late 1995 which have solid backing through their own titles; although given a high profile launch, the Mandarin manga graphic novels launched in January 1995 turned out to be a one-off dip of the toe into the market. Gollancz are unlikely to issue any more original graphic novels in the near future and HarperCollins are waiting to see whether Playing the Game succeeds, and since it slid onto the market without any publicity through the trade press, sales will probably follow the same pattern as James Herbert's The City released in early 1994 which proved that Herbert's followers did not move in droves to take the illustrated story to their hearts. With that in mind, it can be said with some certainty that the next two years will almost certainly see no more original graphic novels from the established publishers who have all now played their hands and lost.

Strangely, two comic related areas did very well: Bantam sold 7,500 copies of the hardcover Death & Life of Superman by Roger Stern, and direct-mailed Superman fans to promote the paperback. Denny O'Neil's Knightfall was another strong-seller, and the story even warranted a junior edition by Alan Grant. 10 original Dredd novels were published by Virgin over the eighteen months between August 1993 and February 1995, led by David Bishop's The Savage Amusement. More comic characters made the transition to paperback than ever before, ranging from The Mask movie novelisation to an original Tintin novel by Frederic Tuten. A proposed series of Marvel character novelisations failed to get off the ground, but the continued interest in comics as source material in Hollywood and by games companies itself guarantees more crossover ventures.

The most successful adaptations came from radio where Dirk Maggs continued a series of shows that captured the essence of comics wonderfully – fun and thrills served up with a cliffhanger ending. A hilarious reworking of the origins of Spider-Man in early 1995 was followed by a 16 week run of Judge Dredd on Radio 1 during the summer, the lead role suitably gritted out by voice actor Gary Martin. If only all adaptations could have been so well presented.

Comics have continued their battle with the establishment with both Savoy and Knockabout in court to defend their wares. Whilst the decision went against Savoy, who failed to overturn a ruling and save their comics from being destroyed under the Obscene Publications Act, the fight to save copies of Robert Crumb's My Trouble With Women, seized by H.M. Customs in January 1995 on the grounds that two panels were obscene despite the fact that the book has been openly on sale in this country for many years, was aided by a number of charity parachute jumps performed by high-profile industry supporters including Paul Hudson, Dez Skinn and Frank Plowright. The outcome of the case was a pleasant surprise for Knockabout's Tony and Carol Bennett, the magistrates in Uxbridge ruling in January 1996 that the books were not obscene under the provision of the 1959 Obscene Publications Act and the Customs Consolidation Act of 1876 (which allows H.M. Customs to have anything else seized alongside the obscene material burnt whether it is itself obscene or not). Although Knockabout were awarded £6,000 in costs, it was not all good news as they estimated their losses over the one-year period to be over £30 000; and H M. Customs seems to be continuing its war of attrition against publishers, and are now refusing to preview samples of imported titles – a publisher now has to import and hope for the best.

The shame of this case was that Knockabout have a consistently high track record for quality of titles, and it would be to a great loss for them to close. That their case was not being supported by larger, more financially stable companies shows how blinkered they are to the question of censorship, which is not simply something that happens to other people: it is happening with random imprecision, a clear example of rules being made up on the hoof, or – if you're completely cynical – on the jackboot.

Pity us if we have to add free expression to our necrology. We have lost many fine talents these past eighteen months, more than can be fully covered here. On December 2, 1994, Tony Weare took his own life at the age of 82, in a typically expressive fashion, asking not to be mourned. Weare was the artist of 'Matt Marriott' in the Evening News for 22 years, a master of using shade to build up the impression of shape. Hugo Pratt, the Italian artist whose work graced a number of British war comics in the late 1950s and early 1960s died on August 20, 1995, aged 68, followed by Carl Giles on August 27th. Giles was without doubt the most widely known cartoonist working in Britain, a favourite of royalty and the common man alike, whose annual collections regularly sold half a million copies. Three months later, Pat Nicolle, whose western and historical strips began to appear in 1950, died at the age of 87. Nicolle was probably best known for his superbly drawn – and accurate in every detail – historical adaptations of both movies and the classics. November was a bad month, as it also marked the death of Desmond Walduck whose illustrations filled numerous annuals in the 1950s-60s. His name will be forever linked with Frank Hampson, as it was often Walduck who took over the finished art for 'Dan Dare' when Hampson was ill, drawing much of the artwork on 'Operation Saturn', 'Prisoners of Space' and 'The Phantom Fleet'. Although Jerry Siegel, who died on January 28, 1996, aged 81, was best known for co-creating Superman, he was also responsible for one of Britain's most enduring characters: The Spider, originally created for Lion by Ted Cowan. Siegel wrote the supervillain strip between 1966-69, and created the superhero duo, Gadgetman and Gimmick Kid for the same paper in 1968. January also saw the death of Jesus Blasco, the Barcelona-based artist of countless British comic strips, probably best known for his work on 'The Steel Claw', Blasco in fact drew strips prolifically and almost non-stop for the UK market between 1954 and 1977, influencing the likes of Brian Bolland with his realism, and use of chiaroscuro and camera-angle POVs.

All this negativity has to be tempered with good news. Where modern British comics are in serious trouble, the back issue market is undergoing something of a renaissance. Much of this can be put down to the attention high profile sales have garnered. Of particular note, a copy of the first issue of Beano became the highest priced British comic when it sold, in September 1995, for £4,200 at postal auction. Whilst the price is an isolated case at the moment, it is worth noting that the sale brought in several serious bids over £3,000, and further sales of Beano #1 in the future may consolidate the asking price somewhere between £3-4,000. The sale of issue #2 in December for £1,275 – only the third comic (along with Dandy #1, which sold at auction for £2,300 in 1995) to pass the four-figure barrier is also a good indicator that early copies of Beano beyond #1 are now attracting serious collector interest.

The postal auction format established by Malcolm Phillips of Comic Book Postal Auctions has attracted furious bidding for other British comics, and notable sales include Smash! #1 for £115 Valiant #1 Hurricane #1 and Champion #1 for £66, Pow! for £55 and Terrific for £50. Individually they are remarkable (as yet one off) prices even for very fine condition comics, often with their free gifts still attached, combined, they show a growing interest in British comics from the 1960s. Other Amalgamated Press titles have all shown a steady growth, from Radio Fun (a copy with rusty staples) at £390 to TV Fun at £66. #2 of Knockout (a tricky issue to get hold of) went recently for £132. Prices on even high profile titles which are not that uncommon have also started to take a hike, including the recent sales of Eagle #1 for £200 and TV Century 21 (with free gift) for £190.

The back issue market has also been stimulated by a series of facsimile reprints which have included a number of scarce science fiction titles from the 1940s and 1950s. These could well have an effect on prices in the future, weeding out the 'readers' from the die-hard 'collectors' and, perhaps, stimulating interest in an area notoriously difficult to collect in. Many new readers will be seeing these comics for the first time, and it is impossible to imagine that they will not return for the real thing if it should become available from dealers.

Like the eye of a storm, nostalgia moves slowly across the comics landscape; the kids growing up in the 1960s are now the late thirty-somethings of the 1990s, and that is the age that nostalgia bites, when life has settled somewhat and forty approaches. We assume this to be true although empirical data is hard to come by; however the disinterest nowadays in comics of the 1920s and early 1930s is compelling evidence, and further proof that age isn't necessarily an important factor in the pricing of comics. If Mystic Meg were to look into the future of British comics she may see luck befalling anyone who kept their old sixties comics in pristine condition with the free gifts attached. Of the modern British comic industry, she may have less to say and maybe we should conclude that its a rollover year and whilst there were no jackpot winner this time, that just means the prize is going to be greater than ever next time round.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This year has seen our biggest expansion in some years, not only because of its two years worth of additional coverage; over 15,000 words of additional information has been added since the previous edition and once again I have to thank my colleagues and fellow collectors who have helped the section grow in both size and accuracy. My sincere thanks go to everyone who has helped in the past and whilst singling out names seems a little unfair, the annual list was getting too long, so I'd like to particularly thank David Ashford, Mike Bentley, Howard Corn of Eagle Times, Bill Lofts, Ray Moore, Lance Rickman, and Bryon Whitworth of The Comic Journal. Research isn't done in isolation and I have to thank all those other historians, researchers, dealers and retailers who have, by their previous efforts, made my job somewhat easier. This is particularly true of Denis Gifford, whose own guides pointed the way and proved that tackling of project of this size was possible. As ever, I save my final thanks for John and Sue Allen-Clark, there are some traditions that are just too hard to break.

PRICING

British comics are often graded differently to American comics and many American comic grades will have little meaning. We have listed only one price corresponding to an American grade of Very Fine: complete, clean, with no major defects, sometimes referred to as British Grade A.

As ever, we leave you with this very important note: the prices listed here are just a guide based upon averages of sales we have noted from dealers. They were not issued to us on tablets of stone, and this is not a bible. The person who decides on whether a price is right is you, the buyer, and a combination of opportunity, desire and cashflow.

When selling comics, the rule of thumb is: don't presume that two contemporary papers have the same value to a collector. Prices depend on two things: supply and demand. You may be able to supply the rarest comic in the world, but it's only 'worth' what you're asking if somebody wants to buy it at that price.

Note: a copy sold at auction September 1995 for £4 200 representing the highest price paid for a British comic. As there have been no further sales recorded at this price, it must be considered a one-off sale price rather than a "going rate" Having said that, the company responsible for the auction has stated that there were several serious bidders over the £3 000 mark. The position of the Guide at this point is healthy caution

BRITISH CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED & RELATED SERIES

INTRODUCTION, BY DAN MALAN

The worldwide success of the CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED series is legendary Albert L Kanter a self-taught Russian Jewish immigrant to America, launched the CLASSIC COMICS series in 1941 Others had serialized comic-strip adaptations of literary works, but A. Kanter believed that a full comic-book could be devoted to one literary title, that a series of such titles could be successful, and that a company publishing only to such a series could prosper He could never have dreamed that he would live to see over a billion copies published worldwide

An entire generation was raised on CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED, which was not really a "series," but individual titles connected only by the now famous black-&-yellow logo Many titles had to be reprinted every year What other series could compare with that long-term popularity? In the U S. CI series between 1941 71, there were 1400 editions of 169 titles The logo CLASSIC COMICS became CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED in 1947 In 1951, they changed from line drawn covers to painted covers Many of the titles got new covers and internal art along the way. They were so popular in the 1950s that they began related series. JUNIORS, SPECIALS and WORLD AROUND US

CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED were published in at least 22 languages in 30 countries Many countries put new covers on their editions, and some produced completely new titles There were three large groups of new foreign CI titles. There were 88 new Greek CI "History & Mythology" titles. There were 60 new Brazilian CI titles from works by Brazilian authors But the major new thrust in foreign CI titles was the joint European CI series which ran simultaneously in about 10 European countries from 1956-76 When the U S. CI series stopped producing new titles in 1962, this European operation picked up the baton and produced 82 new titles from 1962-76

1996 BRITISH CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED UPDATE BY DAN MALAN

Since the last edition, many new CI editions have been reported, but little new input on pricing I did hear about a British dealer holding out for £200 for a Doctor No. But the most significant discovery was two hardback deluxe ed. covers on softcover editions, with (121) reorder lists, but no cover price, indicia or printing information. For new edition prices, see other editions of the same title and cover.

The British CLASSICS ILLUSTRATED series was by far the most complicated, or as we like to say the most challenging Back in the 1970s American collectors were able to research and compile information on nearly 1400 U S CI editions. That is now included in the U S Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide. Now we are doing the same for British CI Please use this current listing as a starting point to write down additional edition info, and sent it to Malan Classical Enterprises We want the British CI listing to shortly be as comprehensive as the U S list This list is also [illegible] attempt at comprehensive pricing of British CI We welcome your inputs on actual selling prices for various British CI editions. Thank you

The British CI series was published from 10/51-6/63. That ending date is our educated guess The first ten chronological titles are the only ones with listed dates But we have many ways to calculate CI dates within a couple months But we need to explain why the British series is so complicated There are many reasons

1) British CI were not issued in numerical order At first the title numbers were issued randomly, then missing numbers were filled in On the next page there is a comprehensive list of the chronologica order in which British CI titles and cover/art variations were issued It represents eight years of research

2) In 1953 British CI added prices for South Africa and Australia, and added New Zealand in 1955 In 1956, they separated and began individual country series We are including the Australian and New Zealand editions and treat them sort of like variations of British editions Few collectors make a distinction be- between British/Australian/New Zealand CI But we are not including here the very different 1947-1953 Australian series Those 72 titles had paper covers, b&w interior art, many new covers different logos, and came in various sizes and shapes A very odd series We will cover them in volume two of our book series There are only rumors of South African CI in English or Afrikaaner
3) British CI from 1951-56 used U S CI numbers, but then began using non-U S CI numbers Much of the later numbering came from the joint European CI series including 15 new titles and 11 new covers There were many printing errors of title numbers on the front covers or reorder lists printing the American or European numbering instead of the (correct) British numbering See 5,
4) Many British CI were later reissued with different covers or internal artwork Altogether there were 167 titles and 227 cover/art variations Most of them were U S Line Drawn Covers with old art (LDC/A1 or L/1), replaced by U S painted covers with new art (PC/A2 or P/2) or by new British covers (NP)
5) Four numbers (2/13/18/40) were each used for two different titles Three early titles got new numbers #2 became #20, #13 became #85, #18 became #56 But #40 Poe's Mysteries) was simply terminated Then four titles had A or B suffixes (56A/139A/139B/158A) Also at least six titles were misprinted with the wrong number #12 misprinted as #132, #65 misprinted as #127, #93 misprinted as #152, #111 misprinted as #16, #127 misprinted as #153, and #139A misprinted as #139 All of these misprints were later corrected except for #139A which exists as #139A only on reorder lists
6) We are very confident that British #51 LORD JIM never existed In all our vast research we have never seen one, or known anyone who ever had one If you can confirm the existence of a copy of British CI#51, please let me know But I do insist on photocopy verification So here s how we arrived at the 167 British CI titles. #1-163 + 4 A/Bs + #40 used twice #51 never existed
7) British CI were published with five different cover prices 1/0 1953-55 editions (HRNs between 82-123) many also list AU/NZ/SA price 1/3 British price for 1951-52 (10 titles) and 1956-63 (from HRN 124 on) 1/6 all New Zealand editions + five 1952 British editions 13/14/25/40/74 2/0 all Australian editions, + four 1952 British 64-page editions 2/6/7/10 2/6 ten 1953-54 CI hardback DELUXE editions, all with new painted covers
8) Bril CI were printed in eight different countries shown here by date and HRN England Ireland Denmark Sweden U S A Poland Netherlands and France

The British CI series began in October 1951, reprinting two random U S titles per month Ten titles (49/68/16/60/64/77/37/22/17/58) were issued between October 1951 and March 1952 All had U S line drawn covers (LDC) The first six editions contained U S. reorder lists with the highest reorder number (HRN) of 82. Four of these scarce early (1/3 price) issues were printed in the Netherlands One interesting feature about these early editions was the outside back cover (obc) ads for multi-title Giant editions (Adventure/Indian/Mystery) Details kept changing name (Giant/Omnibus/Monster/Companion) price (6/0, 7/6, 6/7), schedule (shortly/September/Autumn) and contents (Indian -#4 +#58 Adventure -#8 then -#6 +#2 Mystery deleted) The INDIAN (17/22/37/58, and ADVENTURE (2/7/10) Giants finally came out about October 1952 and are now very rare/valuable CI#s 40 & 74 list them as available plus a gift box (49/60/68/77) probably never published

Getting back to the CI themselves after the first ten titles they decided to diversify with more valuable editions During 1952 they issued five 1/6 editions (13/14/25/40/74) with stiff covers and four 2/0 editions (2/6/7/10) which had 64 pages each and were bound instead of stapled Evidently the more expensive titles did not sell well because they then dropped the price to 1/0 (15/18/78/82) right away at the beginning of 1953 Those four 1/0 editions also list a 1/6 price for South Africa and a 1/9 price for Australia We list these as 1/16/19 to show all three prices The 1/9 Australian price quickly changed to 2/0 We mentioned above the earlier Australian CI series They had no dates or title numbers, but we were able to calculate that the 72 titles ran monthly from 7/47-6/53 when they joined the British series The last Australian b&w CI (US#104) has an illustrated ad for the new series "with full-color artwork " Many early British CI can be found with "2/0 Australia" stickers over the price We do not count stickers as variations

The other major development of 1953 was the introduction of the 2/6 Hardback Deluxe Editions They were hardback books with new wraparound painted covers and a small CI logo at the bottom They had neither numbers nor reorder lists. We did not list them in the regular CI editions, but in a special category They are all rare and valuable In early 1953, the regular CI editions began announcing Deluxe editions, first 4, then 8, 10, 12, 14, and then back down to 10 We are confident that they only issued ten (CIs 15/18/78/82/89/ 104/106/107/108/112) Most of these copies which now turn up have spines all torn up The last Deluxe ad was in 1955

There were also Bible Comics ads These were British hardback reprints of the 1940s U S EC Picture Stories from the Bible At this time the random U S titles jumped up to the 100+ range with many western stories, which were then popular Towards the end of 1955 the schedule increased to two new titles per month, and the first ad for CI Juniors appeared Also, the first cover/art change appeared with #13 changing from LDC/A1 to PC/A1 later changing to A2 Plus, New Zealand was added at 1/6 We list that cover pricing as 1/16/16/2 for GB/SA/NZ/AU Then each country began its own individual country series but all printed together

In 1956, the joint European CI series began with two new CI titles monthly in 10 languages simultaneously. This answers many British questions such as why are there coming-next ads in over 30 titles in the middle of the British series? Or where did all those new covers and titles come from? It also enables us to do rather precise dating on years and years of undated British CI It even allows us to predict as yet undiscovered British CI editions

There are 34 British CI editions with ibc coming-next ads coinciding exactly with #1 34 in the joint European series, while the British numbering was random Many of these titles were new to the British series, some were unchanged reprints while some were reprints but changed to PCs or A2 (49/78/77/64/6/10/15) You can find them in 1/3, 1/6 & 2/0 editions They also issued other new titles which do no have coming-next ads So 1956 was one busy year between British Australian and New Zealand editions with and without ads they published about 130 editions

This was also when the British CI series began to fill in the missing numbers from the random numbering schedule previously employed They issued random titles from 1951-56 up to #129 Then from 1956-60 they filled in the missing numbers So for the next five years all editions had HRNs of 126 or 129 How can we tell all those editions apart? We use a dual HRN with the second number being the highest filled in number If an HRN is 126 or 129, look for #1 If there is no #1 on the list then 126 or 129 is the correct HRN If there is a #1 then look through the list for these numbers 12/19/28/33/39/45/52/56/65/76/83/85/95 Those are the HRN filled-in numbers A first edition of CI#1 HUCKLEBERRY FINN would have an HRN of 129/12 That means that the highest number on the reorder list is 129 and of the filled-in numbers there is a #12 but not a #19 The next edition of CI#1 has the filled in numbers up to #76, so it has an HRN of 129/76 It may seem complicated but with a little practice you can master the technique Any dealer's list with British CIs for sale is full of HRNs 126 and 129 This allows for precise edition identification Why is this so important? One particular edition may have a very rare cover or artwork variation and be worth much more British #1 was also the point at which non-U S numbering began After five years, they finally published #1 which is U S CI#19 So in this list we will refer to it as #1(US#19,

By 1960 they had filled in all the missing numbers But just as things began getting too simple again there was another major development in America In 1961 (thru circumstances way too complicated to cover here - see my Classics book V1) the American publisher William Kanter (son of the founder, was influenced to stop the production of new CI titles in America This influence was primarily exerted by the distributor the Curtis Co By this time the European operation was going great So William decided to basically shift the entire operation overseas and actually moved to England So in 1961 behind the scenes both Thorpe & Porter in England and another Swedish company began production of new CI titles So by the beginning of 1962 the CI baton had completely shifted to Europe Some of the new titles actually had artwork already prepared in the U S but never published It really is a shame there was not more communication back then because American CI enthusiasts would have jumped at the chance to get the new European CI titles

By 1960 the U S CI publisher Gilberton had the largest European distribution of any American publication not just comics Not only were 10 countries issuing two CI monthly apiece but by then all those countries were publishing the three spin-off series CI JUNIORS SPECIALS and WORLD ILLUSTRATED There were also all those reprint editions of CI and Juniors Counting all editions of all CI series in 1960 nearly 1 000 editions of CI were published in Europe! In the U S , CI Juniors began in 1953 Specials in 1955 and Wor[illegible] 1962 [illegible] uncertain if they were all issued British Juniors with the "CI-Junior" logo are quite scarce They ended in 1957 In 1959 the series began again as PIXI TALES with non-U S numbering The first ad for British SPECIALs was in 1957 for 10 Commandments The British WORLD ILLUSTRATED series began in 1959 There were 88 Pixi 8 Specials and 34 WI of which 11 Pixi and 8 WI were new British titles

But the most significant new British titles are in the regular CI series. The British CI series contains 12 new covers and 15 new titles. The new covers are #s 14, 16(redrawn), 17, 20, 22, 37, 53, 73, 74, 77, 82 & 135 (US#43) of which three are quite valuable (53/74/135). Of the 15 new "titles," two are actually new art. #84 THE GOLD BUG has a second edition with HRN 141 with new cover & interior art. #116 TYPEE has a second edition with HRN 141 with the same cover but all-new art. The other 13 new British titles are 143, 146-150, 156, 157, 158A, 159, & 161-163. #158A DR NO may be the most sought-after of all the new British titles but #163 THE ARGONAUTS is the rarest.

You can see from the list that there is only the 2/0 edition of #163. It appears that the "British" branch of the series was actually cutting back early. You may notice from the list that we have yet to find any 1/3 editions of many late titles: 135/138/142/151/152/153/154/155/158A/163. There was a collector who wrote to Thorpe & Porter in 1963 and got the official order list, and all those titles are omitted from the list, plus #51 and 20+ other titles. It lists #152 as Wild Animals. The British series never corrected that misprint. One issue we have wrestled with here is that many British editions are worth more in the U.S. than they are in England. American comics are quite expensive. A Mint set of British CI (1st editions) would be worth about US$5,000 (in England). A Mint set of U.S. CI (1st eds) is worth about US$28,000. American collectors are simply used to paying large amounts for comics, especially rare items. There is a great demand in America for British CI of new titles or covers, plus new Juniors, WI, the ten hardback Deluxe, the two Giants, any Double Duos, or related items. So we are here caught in a dilemma. Should we list the value in England or should we list the "international" value? Is it fair for Americans to buy up all the new British titles so there are hardly any left for British collectors? Since this is the "British" comic book price guide, it seemed only fair to list current market value in England, not in America. But in our classics collectibles book series we address this international pricing dilemma in a comprehensive way. A great deal of research has been done on the artists who did the CI series.

The early U.S. artists were of little note, until Jerry Iger in 1945 took over as Art Director. His brought in his "shop" of artists Two of his artists became the most prominent CI artists Henry C Kiefer and Alex Blum But by the mid-1950s they were gone, and a new artist group (primarily former EC artists) had arrived The most prominent later artists were Norman Node George Evans & Gerald McCann When CI production moved to Europe in 1962, British artists dominated Norman Light (143 & 156) Mick Anglo (84, 148 & 150), Denis Gifford (146), and Jennifer Robertson (147 + Juniors) The art for #158 DR NO was by Norman Node, originally done for a never-published U S Dell Movie Classic The new art for 116.TYPEE was by American artist Luis Dominguez to be the U S CI A2 version but never issued here The artist for 162 SAGA OF THE NORTH was Tomas Porto from a Spanish artist group which became prominent in later European CI titles

Can anyone help us with artist info on other new British titles, such as THE AENEID and THE ARGONAUTS? British CI series ended about June of 1963 But the European CI operation, directed by a man named "Bo All" in Sweden, published another 67 CI titles from 1963 to 1976 In the early 1970s, a British publisher, Top Sellers, Ltd, published 24 more of those new European CI titles Double Duos (see below) Many British CI collectors are interested in the U S. CI titles never issued in the British series Here are those U.S. titles, with the British Pounds cost in GOOD-FINE-NEAR MINT for the cheapest edition of each title

JOSEPH KOCH'S AVALANCHE PRESENTS

2 000 000 COMICS & MAGAZINES FOR SALE OR TRADE

Over the last 20 years we have shipped over 1 000 000 comics, magazines, and related items to the United Kingdom, Ireland, and the continent.

Our 150 page tabloid sized AVALANCHE OF WONDER catalgue is larger than say, the Daily Sport, or to be more upscale - Hamburg's Die Zeit. Our trade and overstock alone would fill most convention halls. The AVALANCHE lists everything from individual comics to bagged sets to small collections to entire inventories.

Not only do we sell. We love to trade. Check out the trade value of your loose ends by consulting the list of categories below. Notice that we find almost anything acceptable except heavy duplication or books of the last 15 years (but we'll even make offers on those as well).

We have been shipping to the United Kingdom, Ireland, & the continent for years and may be able to make special shipping arrangements to & from your nearest port, airport, or place of business. Conversely, we are always looking for any new shipping arrangements you may suggest.

Send $3.00 (or its local equivalent in pounds, DM, francs etc) to the address below & we will rush you our latest SALE/TRADE AVALANCHE. And remember, if you're in New York, call for an appointment to visit the warehouse.

WE WILL TRADE FOR YOUR LOOSE ENDS, SURPLUS, ETC Got some stray comics, books or magazines? Trade them to us. Trade values given in 1st column are against material listed in overstock section at right. Trade values listed in 2 right hand columns refer to pages in our 150 page catalogue (send $3.00; $4 00 via phone & charge card) Trades from catalogue will require alternate choices. If trading from overstock list at right, simply invoice your books in accordance with category list below and ship. All trade prices based on F or better condition; items in good to very good will trade for 50% of listed value; items in fair (must be complete with cover) will trade for 25% of listed value; if sending more than 5 of an issue, fax 1st;
Questions? Fax us with your questions & fax number and we will get back to you.

Just the Facts:

Fact 1: Absolutely no other comic dealer buys more Golden Age and Silver Age comics than we do.

Although the pages of Comic Buyers' Guide are filled with other dealers offering to pay "top dollar", The Fact Is that Metropolis spends more money on quality comic book collections, year in and year out, than any other dealer in the country. The Fact Is in 1995 we have spent over $2 million on collectibles. We have the funds and the expertise to back up our words. If you have books to sell, call us at: 00-1-212-260-4147. If you know of any comic book or movie poster collections, call us today for a generous finder's fee. All calls will be kept strictly confidential.

Fact 2: Absolutely no other comic dealer sells more Golden and Silver Age books than we do.

We simply have the best stock of Golden and Silver Age comic books in the world. The thousands of collectors familiar with our strict grading standards and excellent service can attest to this. Chances are, if you want it, we have it.

COMIC BOOKS $WANTED$

The following amounts represent a small sample of the prices that we will pay for your comic books. While other dealers may claim that they will pay top dollar when it comes down to it, they simply do not. If you have comics to sell we invite you to contact every comic dealer in the country to get their offers. Then come to us to get your best offer. METROPOLIS COLLECTIBLES is not a store. We are a Golden and Silver Age mail order comic company. We can afford to pay the highest price for your Golden and Silver Age comics because as the largest dealer in the world of this type of material that's all we sell. If you wish to sell us your comic books, please ship the books securely via either Registered U.S. Mail or U.P.S. However if your collection is too large to ship, kindly send us a detailed list of what you have and we will travel directly to you. The prices below are for NM copies in U.S. funds, however we are interested in ALL grades. Thank you
